Chris has extensive patent prosecution experience, with a particular focus on the electrical and computer-related arts for clients with complex technology.

During his career in private practice he has led programs to harvest inventions from inventors, counseled clients on which inventions to pursue patent protection, and drafted and prosecuted patent applications to issuance in the US and major foreign patent offices, including in Japan, Europe, China, and Canada.

Chris formerly worked as a patent examiner with the US Patent & Trademark Office (USPTO) where he examined patent applications in Multiplex Communications. He has also held associate positions at law firms Loeb & Loeb LLP, and Banner & Witcoff, Ltd.
